Fair chiefs mull over parades

The County Fair Association Board of Directors will receive a recommendation to discontinue the almost 40-year old fair parade at tonight's board meeting.

Directors are also scheduled to formally act on a pact with the city for renting the Young California Building as a tennis facility.

The board convenes at 8 p.m. in the Fair Association administration building board room.

Still to come is the Pleasanton City Council action on the proposal. That is expected to come Nov. 19.

The agreement calls for the city to maintain and supervise four indoor courts for a period of 10 months at a monthly rental fee of $2400. Estimated operating expenses are $6000 per month.

The County Fair Association is paying for installation of the courts.

Word of the county fair parade's possible demise was first broken by The Times on Sunday.

The recommendation was arrived at by the fair board's entertainment and special events committee.

Program up to voters

Redevelopment on March ballot

PLEASANTON — The city council last night voted unaninmously to place the redevelopment question on the March 2, 1976 ballot.

After the vote was taken the city council sitting as the Pleasanton Redevelopment agency began a public hearing on the revised $4.5 million redevelopment plan, continued from August 11, at which time the original $27 million plan was being considered.

Mayor Ed Kinney cautioned the packed house that no decision on the redevelopment plan would be made that evening since it would be on the March ballot.

Cith manager Bill Edgar began the hearing noting the revisions in the newer plan.

He said the improvements were made after listening to the Chamber of Commerce. Citizens Against Redevelopment (CARD) and the citizenry.

"The revised plan could successfully accomplish a limited number of downtown construction projects," Edgar said.

He said only two of six projects, the extension of Peters Avenue and the completion of the Del Valle Parkway, would require land acquisition.

Edgar said that if the proposed Stoneridge shopping center is constructed the sixth project would take five years to build and five more years to retire the bonds through tax increment financing.

If the shopping center is not built the plan would take twice as long.

Chamber of Commerce President Ben Fernandez commended the council for waiting three months to make a decision.

"It was with a great deal of relief that we (the Chamber) took a second look at the plan," Fernandez said.

The Chamber president criticized the size, powers and projects included in the original plan.

He said revitalization of the downtown "is the most essential thing in Pleasanton."

CARD's Wally Mayer read a three-page prepared statement asking that the agency be dissolved.

"The ballot measure should be a decisive one, in which the lines are clearly drawn so that there can be no mistake in the interpretion of what the people say by their vote," he said.

Mayer denied that CARD was experiencing dissention or deterioration of its ranks.

He blasted the city council saying the citizens of Pleasanton have been "ripped off for the cost of two redevelopment plans."

Mayer referred to legislation pending in the assembly which would revise the redevelopment laws and could possibly change the current plan.

Alternate church plans suggested

Because of new information which became available after June 15 when a vote was taken by the congregation of the United Presbyterian Church in Pleasanton to move the church and social hall to the Mirad site, alternate plans were presented during the Building Committee's report to the congregation on Sunday.

Charlotte Severin, Robert Myers and Lorri Lund gave a presentation, along with showing pictures of their plants for retaining the church on its present site on Neal Street with the necessary expansion taking place.

The group feels because the sanctuary is a Classic Adam Church and because of its uniqueness and historical background it should remain on its present location. They also pointed out that the 100 year edifice has been designated as an official historic site in the Alameda County Survey. This survey was taken by the Junior League and recorded in print in the Bancroft Library at the University of California, Berkeley. Although not recorded as a state or national historical site, Lorri Lund pointed out to the congregation that an amphi-theater could be made for Federal grant from the National Trust for restoration, if the church remains on the present site.

Another alternate plan presented by Mrs. Warren Harding was to either sell the church or rent it out to another congregation who may be just in the growing stages, yet the seating capacity would suit their needs.

She further went on to state that she felt "loyal to groups, saving money and to preserve architectural design: has lead to hinder "clear" thinking and planning.

The third alternate given by the Reverend Vogt following pertinent questions on when is it considered necessary to build a church population wise, was that "another Presbyterian church could be built" if it could be shown the congregation needed it."

Center plans exempt from review

City must trust county

PLEASANTON — Alameda County intends to spend $468,000 to purchase 56 acres near Sunol Boulevard for a county services center, but it has shown no development plans to the city.

That was the word yesterday from Pleasanton city officials who told The Times that since the county is a government entity, it won't be subject to the standard design and building review procedures to which other developers are subject.

It means the city will have only the good graces of the county as assurances that it will develop the parcel in harmony with its surroundings and won't raise any traffic problems in the area.

City staff officials were not even certain yesterday where the county will put the entrance to the office site. Assistant City Manager Alan Campbell said the most logical site would be near Minnie Street adjacent to Pleasanton Elementary School. The county would be expected to contribute to the extension and widening of Pico Avenue down through the vicinity of the school and the road's eventual link to Bernal Avenue near what is now the Corral Drive-in, according to Campbell.

Campbell and City Manager Bill Edgar expressed confidence that the county will notify the city of its plans as they materialize.

Campbell doubted the development would present any special traffic problems. He compared the proposed development to the Kaiser Center for Technology located further down Sunol Boulevard. "The county center won't be like a shopping center with many people coming and going. There will be fewer people than at the Kaiser Center and they pose no problem," said Campbell.

The county is aware that it will be expected to pay its share of Pico avenue extension and widening, said Campbell. They'll probably be expected to pay for two lanes of an eventual four-lane roadway, he said.

"Two lanes is all you will need for many years there," said Campbell. "The school is on the other side and the city would pick up that part of the four lanes."

Edgar said he expects good cooperation from the county board of supervisors. The supervisors will consider purchase of the site December 2.

County public works director Herb Crowle was unavailable for comment yesterday.

Doug Balaban solos at Amador jazz concert

PLEASANTON— The Amador Valley High School jazz bands will present their annual jazz concert on Friday, Nov. 21 at 8 p.m. n the high school auditorium.

Guest artist on the program will be clarinetist Doug Balaban, former Amador band student.

Balaban is currently attending Cal State Hayward and doing his student teaching in music at Amador Valley High. He will form "Artie Shaw's Concerto for Clarinet," the jazz classic from the "Swing Era."

The Amador advanced jazz band will perform "Jazz Suite," "Look What You've Done to My Song, "Awright, Awright, Corazon," with feature solos by Nick DiScala, tenor sax; Tom Laird, alto and soprano sax; George Russell, trombone; Pete John, trombone; Layne Williams, trumpet; Steve Churchill, trumpet; Steve Newcombe, drums; Pat Leach, bass guitar.

Parading in Pleasanton: for soccer, Santa, firemen, Fair

PLEASANTON — This city may lose its 40 year old tradition of hosting the Alameda County Fair parade soon, but it will remain the parade capital of the valley.

The fair board directors will meet tonight to consider a proposal by their special events commmittee to drop the parade because it is running into the red ink. Last year's parade went nearly $1,000 over budget.

But disposal of the fair parade would be the only downward trend in an otherwise healthy local parade picture.

There are parades for the opening of soccer season, the arrival of Santa Claus, celebrating the annual fireman's muster, and observing Memorial Day. Two years ago a radio station even started a parade just to have a parade, the Good Times Roll Parade, an event that everyone who ever wanted to be in a parade could join.

There are even parades like one last Saturday which enabled 27 marching bands from around California to show off their strutting skills for three hours to a crowd of a couple of thousand.

As pleasant as their music seemed to the ears of Main Street merchants, there was at least one sour note. As Renee Rice, owner of the Frilly Dilly dress shop, said, "I liked the music, but Sunday is the best day of the week for a parade." That's when downtown businesses are closed.

The city recently adopted a parade ordinance to handle the burgeoning boom in parades. Police captain Ron Nelson said he agreed with merchants who feel that Sunday is the best day of the week for a parade. Traffic is a big headache on Saturdays and blocking off streets for a parade only compounds that problem, said Nelson.

Assistant city attorney Harvey Levine said that some people had proposed writing a Sunday-only clause into the parade ordinance, but he decided against it. The topic could be controversial since some churches have strong feelings about parading on Sundays.

The parade ordinance did not grow out of any specific parade city trouble with any of the parades, but was a long-overdue concession by the city that a standardized parade route and procedures are needed, said Nelson.

The ordinance sends parades down Main Street, over Rose Avenue and down to the fairgrounds via Pleasanton Avenue. There are two starting alternatives: St. John Street or Amador High School.

St. John's Street was the traditional starting point in the old days, said Nelson, who has lived here since 1946. The parades could't be started any futher north because traffic had to be routed over Ray Street to First Street. The First Street bridge was not constructed until 1960 and that took the pressure off the Main Street bridge, said Nelson.

Back in the 1930's, the city had three major parades, only one of which has survived. The Fair Parade started in the middle 1930's at the behest of Jim Trimingham and other local merchants who also helped to organize the county fair in Pleasanton.

There was a religious parade, the Holy Ghost parade, and something called the Fiesta Del Vino which celebrated the local wine industry perhaps three or four times during the '30's decade.

As Pleasanton grew, attendance has picked up at the parades, said Nelson. The real topper came two years ago when radio station KNBR, in a scheme to promote a couple of disc jockeys, decided on Pleasanton as the site of the Good Times Roll parade.

The first event attracted a crowd of 30,000, according to police estimates. Newspapers had the crowd pegged at 40-50,000, he added.

A big parade like the Good Times Roll event requires two shifts of police working together to control traffic and crowds, said Nelson. It also takes the time of street crews who put up 90 traffic barricades. The whole bill in city overtime alone is about $1000, he estimated. The city council can require reimbursement from private organizations if it wishes, said Nelson. Or it can refuse to issue a parade permit. It's up to the city council to decide what sort of parade it thinks is in the community's best interests, said Nelson.

Nelson thinks the county fair parade has diminished in recent years because of the high cost of everything.

"It's my own personal opinion, but I think many of the parade exhibits and bands that drew the crowds are not driving as far. It costs more now to charter buses or drive cars from Los Angeles, for example. Now some groups just enter parades where they know the prizes are big and they have a good chance of winning," said Nelson.

Chamber of Commerce president Chan Henderson was music advisor to the Pleasanton Elementary School Tartan Band for 18 years. One of his jobs was to get the youths prepared for Pleasanton's rounds of parades. "The Veteran's Day parade was the first we would enter. It was just about the right amount of time after the beginning of school to get them ready. We marched about 125 students, a big number at that age. Many of them were so short they could not even see up to the front of the line," said Henderson.

There was always a parade. . .

Ever since Pleasanton can remember, there has been a Main Street parade. This colorful scene was probably in tribute to July 4, back in the days when white-uniformed bandsmen marched in the dust, while bonneted ladies and gentleman stood on the board walks to salute the calvalcade of happy people and decorated horses. Gas lamps, giant trees and the still-familiar "Lewis Brothers Hardware" at the corner of Main and Division, are reminders of the town that was.

DeAnza witness

The only representative from the Livermore-Amador Valley to witness the Bicentennial's first celebrations in honor of the historic DeAnza expedition, Barbara Joan Smith of Pleasanton poses with Yginio Aguirre who portrayed DeAnza in reenactment ceremonies at Tubac, Ariz. See page two for the account of history in the re-making.

Juan Bautista DeAnza and the California-bound colonists escorted by ten leather-jacketed soldiers, arrived at Mission San Xavier del Bac on Oct. 25, 1775. Three couples of the expedition party were married the next day, among them ancestors of the woman who married Livermore's founder. Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Newton and Juanita Vidalin of Livermore witnessed the reenactment of these events at the mission near Tuscon, Ariz.

Pleasanton woman watches history in review

With the picturesque ruins of the 18th Century Tubac Presidio as a backdrop, a crowd of spectators — Barbara Joan Smith of Pleasanton among them — gathered to watch history pass in review.

The occasion was the bicentennail reenactment of scenes in October 1775 as Juan Bautisto DeAnza and his band of colonists embarked on the great adventure of migrating to California and establishing a settlement at the port of San Francisco. The setting was Tubac, Ariz., a town with 10,000 years of Indian history and possibly the oldest existing settlement in the United States.

Tubac is set in a tranquil valley, surrounded by desert mountains green at this time of year, 40 miles from Tuscon and 20 miles from the Mexican border, according to Ms. Smith who has exhibited paintings for many years at an art gallery in Tubac and is well-known among townspeople there.

As the only representative from the Livermore-Amador Valley present at the bicentennial ceremonies in Tubac, Barbara Joan submitted the names of 18 Livermore residents descended from members of the De Anza party which made history 200 years ago. These names were read in the concluding ceremony at the Old Tubac Presidio along with excerpts from the diaries of DeAnza and his companion Padre Font.

"From the spectator's point of view, the departure ceremony took me back into history," exclaims Ms. Smith. "It was so authentic it gave me goose bumps." Mounted soldiers in 18th Century regalia stood at attention, authentically - costumed men, women and children with traveling gear approached the altas, as the padre said a final Mass and distributed Communion to the departing expedition. Will Rogers, Jr., read a narrative of the leave-taking, calling the reenactment ceremonies "Tubac's second day in history."

"It was very, very moving," concluded Ms. Smith.

Several days later on Oct. 26, three Livermore residents witnessed another bicentennial reenactment, this time at Tuscon, Ariz. They were Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Newton and Mrs. Juanita Vidalin, a descendant of DeAnza party members. Mrs. Newton, who authored a book on the De-Anza expedition and descendants of that party who founded the city of Livermore, commended the authenticity of the reenactment.

"The soldiers were beautifully costumed, and the military drill they executed was marvelous to watch," she testified. She saw the entire reenactment party, comprising about 240 persons including children, camped along a riverside the evening before the ceremony.

The Newtons and Mrs. Vidalin had made the trip especially to witness the reenactment of the marriage of three couples at the Mission San Xavier del Bac near Tuscon. Among the couples married Oct. 26, 1775 at the mission were one Ignacio de Higuera and Maria Michael Bojorques who later became the grandparents of Josefa Higuera, wife of Robert Livermore.

"I was very moved, especially when it was mentioned that a Bernal witnessed the original wedding, since so many Bernals reside in the valley," said Mrs. Newton.

Livermore is planning its own reenactment of DeAnza's trek through the Livermore Valley April 4, 1976.

Council to mull gas deal

LIVERMORE — The city council, which last week declined to register its opposition to a federal advance payment program for Alaskan natural gas, will reconsider the matter Nov. 17.

Under an advance payment program adopted by the Federal Power Commission (FPC), the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) has approved a $640 million transaction between Pacific Lighting and Atlantic Richfield (ARCO) and most recently, a $320 million transaction between the Exxon Corporation and Pacific Gas and Electric (PG&E).

These payments assure California consumers delivery of natural gas from the Alaskan pipelines but according to a resolution prepared by Livermore City Councilman Don Miller, "result in playing off consumers of various areas against each other to the benefit only of Alaskan producers."

In a cover letter to the resolution, which Miller wrote in hopes of receiving council endorsement last week, he noted that "the California PUC had to sign agreements for advance payments because without it, the big oil companies would go elsewhere to collect the money from some other PUC and leave us literally in the cold."

Only Councilman John Staley, however, was prepared to endorse Miller's resolution last week. The other three council members apparently deferred to PG&E Livermore office manager Cy Beebe, who asked that more time be granted to study the latest CPUC-Exxon agreement.

Fashion, theater, books

Jeans-clad bundle of talent to delight LAA

lifestyle

By REINA WHITNEY

She was seated at her drawing board skillfully sketching her modish fashion designs, while she, herself, was dressed in the costume of the day — jeans and sweater. So much talent packaged into one individual body seemed a mite unfair; but when it's coupled with big blue- grey eyes, light brown hair and a fair amount of good looks, it became almost unbelievable. Lesley Donley's warmness and gracious hospitality helped us overlook our own inadequacies.

This talented young woman will be the demonstrating artist at the Livermore Art Association's 7:30 p.m. general meeting, November 12. The public is invited to this admission-free gathering at the Recreation Center in Livermore.

Since she teaches fashion design in the adult night classes at Dublin and Livermore High, this will be her subject matter. But her talents are so diversified she could just as easily give a talk and demonstration on watercolors, children's books illustrating, ad illustration — or maybe it could be children's theatre costume design, the writing of T.V. or poetry.

Currently studying at the San Francisco Academy of Art to keep herself abreast of the ever-changing modes, she has also studied at the Cooper School of Art and the Cleveland Institute of Art both in Cleveland, and the Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Lesley's first professional art commitment was with the Ohio Bell Telephone Company in Cleveland, drawing ads for the Yellow Pages.

She met her husband, Cliff, a Dublin High School English teacher, while they were both in a production of "The Seven Year Itch" in Lakewood, Ohio. After their marriage, she worked with him at the Lakewood Little Theatre designing costumes for the children's productions and dressing the sets in the adult productions.

Now the pair is collaborating on television scripts. Two are currently under consideration for the "Hawaii 5-0" show and another has been submitted to the "Bob Newhart Show."

Locally she has done political cartoons for the Tri-Valley Herald and News on a free-lance basis.

Although Mrs. Donley is now the busy mother of two very busy little boys, Matthew 9 and Jonathan "terrible 3," she manages to maintain an active schedule with an amazing sense of humor. She has a chortling laugh that comes up from her toes as she tells you of the exploits of her two sons. Unlike most mothers who are defeated by exasperation, she has actually kept a diary of their antics and has incorporated them into some very imaginative children's books.

The books have the same charming appeal of Dr. Seuss. Lesley does all the clever illustrations for "Alvin Puddleman and the Hooligan Goul" and "Jaffrey Joe — The Boy With the Ear on His Toe." None of her children's books have been accepted for publication, but obviously they give her and her children great pleasure. A rejection slip has yet to stop her production.

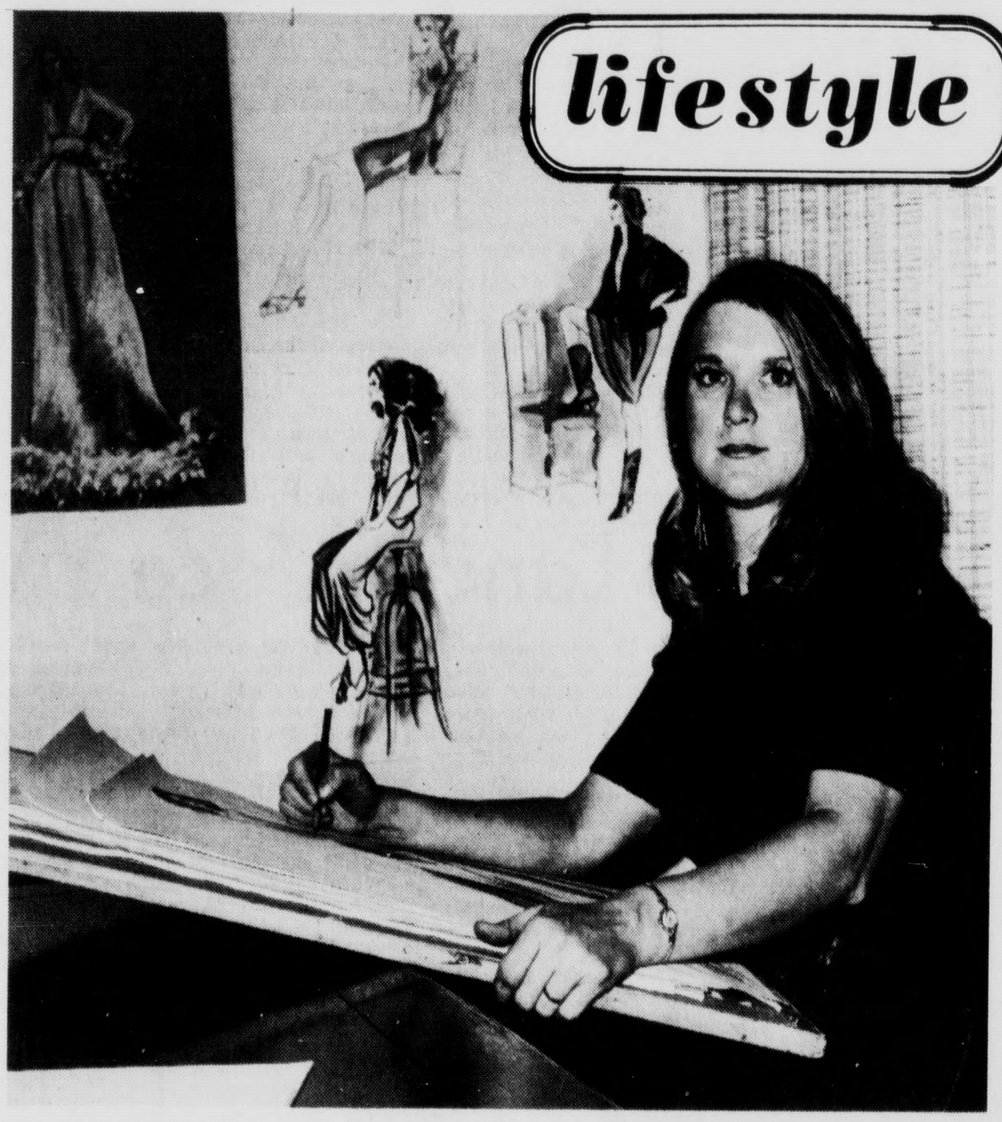
Daughter of an English war bride, and born in England herself, she still enjoys sipping her tea during moments of relaxation. Some of the beautiful watercolors that decorate her walls were painted during other "moments of leisure," at the Delta where she and her husband moor a boat.

To further express her over-abundant energy, she roller-skates every Thursday at Dublin while Matt is in school and Jonathan is with a sitter. Her enthusiasm is infectious as she tells you. "I already can do 'Academy Blues' and the 'Siesta Tango'." Jonathan pipes up with "We all go skating on Saturday."

- Johnathan is bursting with the same energy with which his mother is endowed, so everyday means riding a bike with "J.D." to tire him out enough so they can both rest.

Lesley Donley's ultimate goal is to be a fashion artist for a leading department store chain, doing fashion ads for newspapers or displays. She says the field is very competetive but it's hard to believe that she won't achieve her goal easily.

- Seeing her demonstrate her amazing talents should be a treat for local art enthusiasts.



Multi-talented Lesley Donley of Livermore will demonstrate fashion design at Wednesday night's meeting of the Livermore Art Association.

Portrait painting

Popular Concord Artist John Pena will conduct beginning and advanced classes in portrait painting starting tonight from 7 to 10 p.m.

The four weekly sessions in either pastel or oil are offered at $20 per person. Classes will meet at the mall at 2222 Second St., Livermore. Artists may register for the classes at The Way Up Gallery in Livermore, telephone 443-3388.

Bucs' bucks lure McKay

Mike Zampa

Save those prayers for John McKay. Please, no candles just because USC's coach of the last 15 years is casting aside job security, home and friends for the humidity of Tampa, and the high pressure of the National Football League.

Somehow John will survive.

CLARENCE DAVIS
Former Trojan

First of all, there's the contract he extracted from management of the fledgling Tampa franchise. No one can be sure what the sum total is because we're not supposed to know. It's a funny thing, since we're privvy to the salaries of congressmen and presidents. But a football coach's earnings are top secret.

In any event, educated guessers figure McKay will be set up comfortably. Maybe on a par with the Six Million Dollar Man after you figure in depreciation for Bionic parts.

What's more, McKay won't be alone in the NFL. The fruits of his labor at USC are sprinkled generously across the map. He'll smile on familiar faces in every town he visits. At least until all those former pupils unleash their McKay-nurtured talent on the old coach.

There are USC graduates filling up nearly every position imaginable on the football field. Linemen? There's Ron Yary of the Minnesota Vikings, and John Vella in Oakland. Charlie Weaver of Detroit is a Trojan-bred linebacker. Raider cornerback Alonzo Thomas played for McKay. So did the much travelled quarterback, Pete Beathard, another Raider until he was waived last weekend.

And running backs? Where to start. Rod McNeill, Mike Garrett, Mike Hull, Clarence Davis and the guy in Buffalo whose first name sounds like a Motown quartet. They all were weaned on USC's ground-oriented offense.

You'd figure just on the list of Trojan alumni alone, that McKay is a wizzard. And he is at USC. His record in 15 seasons is eighth best among active major college coaches. McKay teams have won 125, lost 36 and tied eight. The winning percentage reads out to better than .755.

Of course that's no guarantee of success in Tampa. McKay will no longer have USC alumni and USC tradition as recruiting weapons. No longer can he lure top prospects away from the opposition. He'll take what the seldom benevolent NFL wants to give in the way of talent.

Tampa management is gambling that he can successfully breech the void between college and pro football. John Ralston has done it at Denver. Dan Devine failed in Green Bay.

One thing everyone is sure of is McKay's personality. He is a public relations genius. His charm and quick wit appeal to writers and fans. For a few years, at least, Tampa will have to survive on charm and audience appeal because it won't win often. From that standpoint, McKay will pay back his bosses.

But in terms of football, what has Tampa purchased for that rumored quarter of a billion?

"A helluva coach," says Clarence Davis, the Raider halfback who fulfilled USC's tradition of great tailbacks in 1969-70.

"And a good man."

There is no kinship between student and teacher where Davis is concerend. But there is respect for McKay.

"He was the type that I never came in contact with except on the football field," Davis says. "Oh if we hap-

Triple tie would vex EBAL

There's nothing in EBAL bylaws to unravel the logjam that could exist next weekend once football season draws to a close.

Three teams, Amador Valley High, Livermore and Granada, are all in the running for the league championship. Two, or all three could finish the season tied for first place. With the champion ticketed for the first-evern North Coast Section playoffs, a clear-cut leader must be determined.

EBAL principals will meet at the Amador School District building Wednesday morning to formulate tie-breaking machinery, should it become necessary after Friday night.

The team that emerges will face Mission Valley Athletic League champion Mission San Jose one week from Friday at Tak Fudenna Field in the playoff opener. The NCS finals will be held the following week.

In the EBAL, Granada is the leader with a 4-0 record. Livermore and Amador are tied for second place at 3-1. Granada whipped Amador last Friday, 42-7. A few weeks back, Amador stunned Livermore, 7-3.

The EBAL campaign winds down Friday night with these games. Granada plays at Livermore, and Amador Valley hosts Dublin. San Ramon and Monte Vista, co-habitants of the EBAL celler, also play.

Here are the possibilities following Friday's games.

Granada can win the championship outright by defeating Livermore, and automatically earn the NCS playoff berth.

Livermore can tie Granada for the crown should it win Friday, and Amador lose. In this case, some tie-breaking device would be necessary to determine the playoff participant.

Or, Amador, Granada and Livermore could wind up in a three-way championship tie. That would require a win by the Dons, and the Cowboys. Again, a tie-breaker would be necessary.

EBAL bylaws state simply that championship standings are determined by the following method: Each league victory counts for two points, a tie, as one point. The team with the most points, is champion.

In the past, teams that tied for the EBAL crown were declared co-champions. "There was no mechanism for breaking a tie because there was no reason to settle it," league secretary George Wilson says.. "The ties remained."

With the advent of playoffs, however, a championship deadlock becomes untenable.

So the league's board of managers will confront the problem Wednesday According to Wilson, several proposals will be forwarded for balloting.

The first would settle a possible two-way tie between Livermore and Granada. The playoff representative would be decided on the outcome of their Friday game. In that case, Livermore would represent the EBAL, because it must defeat Granada to tie for the championship.

In case of a three-way tie, another proposal calls for a vote of league principals to determine the playoff representative. Though there are eight EBAL schools, only six play varsity football. It is not clear if only participating schools would vote In any event, a simple majority would advance one team to the game with Mission San Jose.

Regardless of any tie-breaking procedures, Wilson said, teams deadlocked for the league crown would be declared co-champions. The tie-breaker would simply provide a playoff representative.

The EBAL will take part in the North Coast's Four A, or large school championships. The other two representatives will come from the Alameda County Athletic League (Pinole Valley) and the Diablo Valley Athletic League (Clayton Valley or Pittsburg).

Lancers face YV for title

The Dublin Lancers are preparing this week for their Pop Warner Football conference championship game Sunday with Ygnacio of Concord at DeLaSalle High School.

The Lancers earned their title berth with a 29-8 victory last weekend over San Leandro in the season-finale at Dublin High School. The Lancers rolled up 356 rushing yards in crushing the Crusaders.

Mark Sanchez ran for 198 yards to finish the season with 1,138. Teammate Jack Trudeau had 130 yards for a season total of 881.

The defense was led by Greg McBride who blocked a punt, and Trudeau, Jim Grant and Pat Murphy, all with interceptions.

San Leandro took an 8-0 lead in the first quarter before Dublin gained possession. On the first play, Sanchez raced 71 yards thanks to a Grant block, and scored. He raced 12 yards to another first quarter touchdown.

Trudeau scored before halftime bursting seven yards over his own tackle.

Sanchez scored the last touchdown on a one-yard fourth-quarter plunge.

Mike Damoulos, Bob Peterson and McBride all played well defensively.

The Dublin Knights scored in the fourth quarter to stun the rival San Ramon Thunderbirds, 6-0.

In other action, the Dublin Squires defeated the Napa Raiders, 47-0.

Cheesers champs

Cheese Factory scored just before the final play of the game to defeat American Realty, 20-18 last weekend in the Livermore Flag Football championship game.

Chuck Kolb hit Mike Fullmer with a three-yard touchdown pass to win the contest. Earlier, Kolb hit Mike Waller on a 35-yard pass to draw Cheese Factory withing striking distance of American.

The league champs will face a team from the Pleasanton Youth Rehabilitation Center this Saturday.

Robinson new USC coach

LOS ANGELES — The University of Southern California yesterday named Pleasanton's John Robinson, an Oakland Raider assistant, to succeed NFL-bound John McKay as the Trojans' head football coach.

Robinson, coached the offensive backs at USC from 1972-74 and currently holds a similar post with the Raiders.

McKay, coach and athltic director, two weeks ago announced he would become coach of the new Tampa franchise of the National Football League.

The 40-year-old Robinson currently is offensive backfield coach of the NFL Oakland Raiders. He was a USC assistant under McKay from 1972 through 1974 after spending 12 years as an assistant coach at his alma mater, Oregon.

JOHN ROBINSON
Replaces McKay

President John R. Hubbard announced the selections which came as a surprise since two members of McKay's current staff, Dave Levy and Craig Fertig, had been most prominently mentioned for the posts.

"Needless to say, we checked all over the country for the judgement of people we respected in the naming of a coach," Dr. Hubbard said. "We arrived at a consensus, but I want to emphasize that I alone made the decision to select John Robinson.

"As an ex-USC assistant coach, he's familiar with the elements that make up this university. He has a rare combination of technical skills and human qualities.

"And I believe he has one of the best minds in football."

Robinson, in taking over the Trojans for next season, is the 16th head coach in their history.

He played end at Oregon and was on the Ducks' team that played in the 1958 Rose Bowl when they lost to favored Ohio State 10-7.

Robinson's career roughly parallels that of McKay. Both were players at Oregon and both were assistant coaches there.

The new USC coach met McKay when the former a player at Oregon and McKay an assistant.

"I was very interested in coaching, even as a player," said Robinson. "I asked John McKay a lot of questions."

Robinson was the offensive backfield coach under McKay at USC from 1972 through 1974 when the Trojans compiled a 31-3-2 record and played three times in the Rose Bowl, winning twice.

Robinson declared, "I consider myself a disciple of John McKay. I have been a tremendous admirer of his and believe in the type of football he has used.

"I like a wide open style of offensive that effectively integrates both running and passing."

Although Robinson has been a friend of McKay's for 20 years, the outgoing coach was unable to attend the news conference announcing his successor because of a prior commitment.

But before leaving the campus, McKay said, "I believe USC has made an excelent choice. In knowing John for two decades, I've been impressed with his tremendous dedication to football."

Born in Chicago, Robinson was reared in Daly City, Calif. and was a three sport star at Serra High School in San Mateo, Calif. before going to Oregon.

HEADACHES

Thousands of people suffer because of headaches. The average person seeks to rid himself of pain the quickest way, rather than to determine the real abnormal condition that is causing continued headaches

Based upon scientific knowledge every organ, gland, muscle and tissue of the body must be supplied with its full quota of vital nerve energy from the brain to function properly. This nerve energy originates in the brain and may only be transmitted to its ultimate destination in the spinal cord by passing through the openings in the spinal column and branching (as an intricate network) to every organ of the body.

If these delicate nerve trunks are subjected to pressure of the hard bony segments of the spine, distress results. The only possible way this vital nerve energy can be restored is to free the passage from the spinal column to the distressed parts of the body.

Upon locating the misaligned segments of the spine, your chiropractor employs a scientific movement, known as adjustment. The sole purpose of this adjustment is for restoration of the misaligned vertebra to its normal position and the removal of pressure on the delicate nerve trunks extending from the spine. With removal of the pressure, vital nerve energy is restored and built-up tension in the muscles is relaxed.

When nerve pressure is removed and tension relaxed, harmony exists. All muscles, glands, cells and tissues begin working together. Where harmony exists, it is impossible for headaches to be present in the human body.

If you are a victim of headaches see your chiropractor. Let him correct the spinal cause and release pressure, relax tension and relieve pain.

pened to see each other on campus we'd walk together and he'd say 'how you doin?' But basically, he was a quiet man.

"I can't say what kind of coaching job he's going to do. Like Ralston, he's got to get the personnel. You just don't know what will happen. But it will be a challenge to him."

Davis, who shook off a season of injuries to rush for 78 yards against New Orleans last Sunday, gained 2,323 in his career at USC. Twice he was an All-Pac 8 running back, once, a second-team All America. He was in the mold of Garrett, Simpson and Anthony Davis, a fleet tailback called on to carry the rushing load for McKay.

"But hold on there," Clarence cautions. "You put me in there with O.J. and Garrett and Anthony, and that's not right. "I wasn't well known like the rest of them. I was just one of the guys there in between. You ask people and they won't remember who was there after Garrett, or who was there after O.J."

Nevertheless, Davis ranks among the all-time leaders in Trojan rushing. And in just his fifth season with Oakland, he may still become one of the Raiders' best. The New Orleans game last weekend was the first this season, Davis says, where he ran with full confidence.

"It helps to get the ball two and three times in a row," Clarence said. "When you carry maybe just once or twice on a drive, you can't get the feel for it."

With McKay, that was never a problem. Trojan tailbacks traditionally account for about a third of USC's offense. They run until they drop, then another is rolled in.

Davis could count on that every Saturday during his college career. Much like he counted on McKay to be there, leading the team to another Rose Bowl, matching wits with the pundits who wondered where he discovered all those fine athletes.

"Back then we didn't know what he was going to do," Davis says. "There was no World Football League and no Tampa franchise, so we didn't think he would leave. After he became athletic director I thought he might give up coaching and just concentrate on that. I guess he fooled everybody.

"He's not going to be dealing with college kids anymore," says Davis, intimating that they undergo a change after graduation. "He's going to be dealing with guys who have been in pro ball a few years.

"We'll have to wait and see what happens."

Blazing Granada jumps to ninth

Granada High School extended its football winning streak to seven games last Friday night with a 42-7 win over Amador Valley. It was rewarded today with the ninth ranking in the East Bay Prep Poll.

The Matadors still don't know, however, if they'll win the EBAL championship. That will be decided this week when they meet Livermore, one of two teams tied for second in the league.

Granada is 4-0, the Cowboys, 3-1. If the Matadors win or tie against the Cowboys, the title is theirs. If not, they will wind up in a championship deadlock.

Granada climed up from the 13th spot in last week's poll on the basis of the big win over Amador, previously undefeated in the EBAL.

Its opponent this Friday, Livermore, earned honorable mention in the ratings after a win over San Ramon.

Financial aide selection top water board agenda

Selection of a financial consultant and discussion of water managment coordination with Zone 7 head the agenda of the Livermore-Amador Valley Water Management Agency (LAVWMA) board meeting, tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the VCSD board room, 7051 Dublin Blvd., Dublin.

The responsibilities of the financial consultant include:

Development of a financial plan, considering problems of interim cashflow and administrative costs during construction of the pipeline.

Establishment of a revenue program, raising money to operate the pipeline, and determine customer charges.

LAVWMA sent a request for applications for the financial consultant position to a list of possible consulting firms.

Board members will consider each candidate based on experience, background, and rates.

Also on the agenda is a discussion of planning programs. The board will consider its response to a Zone 7 invitation to participate in a fact-finding work session on water management for the valley.

The board will also prepare for the Corps of Engineers meeting on Nov. 13. Finance officer Newell Cummings will give a report on LAVWMA finances. At the Oct. 23 meeting Cummings noted LAVWMA has no more authority to spend funds, since all state and participating agency monies have been spent.

LAVWMA cannot commit participating agencies to additional expenditures which might not be reimbursed unless those expenditures were first budgeted.

Cummings urged amending the LAVWMA budget to include additional expenses incurred.

Fallon fish study finds fans

DUBLIN— Pavlov's dogs have little on Vinella's goldfish!

But, taking a page from the famed behaviorist's notebook, sixth graders of Paul Vinella at Fallon School are raising, caring for and studying the habits of 38 goldfish, many of which were caught in the creek behind the Kodak plant.

Since placing the silvery orange fish in a pond Sept. 15, the students have studied the actions and reactions to various stimulus, including the presence of the children. They compare this with the behavior of humans.

Initially, the fish used to swim away from Vinella and the students whenever they approached the pond, located directly behind the classroom.

The tiny creatures used to take about five minutes to find food cast upon the water —now it takes approximately two minutes.

In fact, the fish will now gather in one certain spot when "the big creatures from inside the building" approach the pond.

Though they could live off life in the pond, Vinella and his students are conscientious in cleaning the pond, maintaining drainage ditches, feeding and seeing to it that disinterested persons do not stray into the habitat.

The pond was constructed between two and three years ago. Adjacent to it are vegetable gardens being maintained by other sixth graders in Gladys Strain's class. The kids say the radishes are looking good, and the lettuce, peas and carrots aren't bad at all.

Anyone for salad ala Fallon while watching the goldfish!

Colorful 'Americana '76' showcased top prep bands

We can hardly wait until next year!

After the turnout and artistic success of Saturday's first-ever "Americana '76 Band Review and Halftime Competition," next year's bicentennial parade and show should be a super spectacular.

Twenty-seven of the better high school marching bands in northern and southern California came to Pleasanton Saturday and by the time evening awards had been distributed at Amador's Patterson Field, approximately 12,000 had witnessed some of the finest playing in valley history.

The band review was the brainchild of Foothill High School band director Bob Moorefield and the Foothill High Band Boosters.

Among those who put in dozens of hours organizing the event were Bob Morgan and Jim Davenport, tournament directors: Henry Berretty and Hank Becker, parade; Jim Bowe, halftime; Betty Servos, food sales; Yvan Albert, program sales; Estelle Newcomb, publicity; Don Williams, facilities; Ann Morgan, review treasurer; Sharon Paukert, hospitality; Don Paukert, trophy presentation. Paukert is president of the Foothill Band Boosters.

Judges for the parade and field competition were as follows: Rowland Nielson, marching and maneuvering; Benton Minor, music judge; David Goedecke, music judge; Shirley Whitcomb, ID unit parade and showmanship; Tom Peacock, drum major judge; Rod Leoffler, percussion judge; Tom Wuetrick, tall flags judge; Jim Hodge, directors award; Lt. Col. Roger McLain, reviewing officer; First Lt. Peter F.N. Fear, inspection officer; Roger Olson, showmanship judge; Robert Moorefield, coordinator of judges.

Judges were from the Pacific Coast Judging Association as well as Cal State Fullerton, Ukiah High School, University of Pacific, Escalon High School, College Park High School and TP Enterprises.

Bands taking part included Prospect Panthers, Saratoga; Half Moon Bay Cougars; Willits; Capuchino Mustangs, San Bruno; John Swett Sugar City Superband, Crockett; San Leandro Pirates; Dublin Gaels; Tracy Bulldogs; Modesto Panthers; Miramonte, Orinda; Silver Creek Raiders, San Jose; Crestmoor, San Bruno; Highlands Scots, Sacramento; John F. Kennedy, Fremont; Thomas Downey High, Modesto; Live Oak Emerald Regime, Morgan Hill; Los Altos Lancers; Armijo High Superband, Fairfield; Livermore Marching Cowboys; Lodi Flames; Piedmont Hills, San Jose; Watsonville Wildcats; Glendora High Tartan Band; Granada High Matador Band; Clovis Golden Cougars; Sunnyvale Jets.

The Pleasanton Rotary Club donated the huge Sweepstakes Trophy presented to the top parade band — Capuchino. Awards were made Saturday afternoon at the Fairgrounds Amphitheatre before a crowd estimated at in excess of 3,000.

Other division winners included Sunnyvale, Armijo, Silver Creek and Half Moon Bay.

Parade awards were presented in Classes A, B, C and D, first through fourth, drum major awards in military and mace, first through third, and halftime awards in Classes I, II and III, first through third.

Judging of those units in the parade started shortly after each unit left the formation area at Amador Valley High. The inspection judge looks for uniform dress, neatness, cleanliness and general condition of equipment and instruments. From the inspection area the competitors entered a warmup area. In the warmup area the unit is able to practice their marching and performance to enable them to be ready for the competition.

A silent area follows in which the band must march with no drums or noise except for drums playing on the rim rather than on the head of the drum. This enables a minimum of distraction from any unit performing in the competition area directly head.

The competition area is 450 feet long. Each band must stop with the front rank of the band on the start of competition line and wait until told to enter competition. When directed to enter competition, the band must step off smartly; they must march at a specified pace; they must start playing before the last rank of the band crosses the competition line; the drum major must salute the reviewing officer (Lt. Col. Roger McLain at the Pleasanton parade); they must march with no maneuvers; and they must continue playing until the last rank of the band crosses the competition-ends line.

Judging in the competition area is performed by five judges. Two music judges are used to evaluate the technical aspects and overall performance of the competition piece. A showmanship judge evaluates the overall band from a standpoint of impact, visual effects and confidence. A marching and maneuvering judge looks for the bands capability to stay in step and maintain the symmetry of the ranks and files. A penalty judge is responisble for timing the bands rate of march and for violations of parade rules.

The participants scoring is based on a 1,000 point total. Music accounts for 500 points, showmanship for 200 and marching for 300. Inspection and penalty judge demerits are deducted from the sum total of the competitors performance.

After the final band passed the review stand Saturday, spectators and participants went on to the Fairgrounds Amphitheatre for awards.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

The weak two bid is not a panacea for all bidding ills. Most experts use it but those who do, don't feel that it is really important.

One advantage is that on occasion it gets the opponents too high.

West has a weak sort of weak two bid, but it does meet the requirements. Eight high-card points and a playable six-card suit. North has a fine double and East keeps up the attack by a jump to four hearts.

South doesn't really want to bid four spades. On the other hand, it would be sheer cowardice to pass so he bids it.

North really should pass, but he likes his hand and suspects skullduggery by the opposition. He Blackwoods his way to six.

There is no play for six. South has to lose a club and the ace of diamonds and will probably lose a trick to the queen of trumps.

Of course, North and South might get to that same slam after a pass by West. North would open one diamond; South would respond one spade and North might head for the stratosphere.

Ask the Jacobys

A North Dakota reader wants to know what we open with:

♠ K Q x ♥ K x x ♦ A K x ♣ A K x x.

This is a book two notrump opening in any standard system. You have 22 high-card points, balanced distribution and all suits stopped. We certainly follow the book here.

Three appointed to center board

SAN RAMON — Three valley residents were recently appointed to the advisory board of the Family Medical Center at 9260 Alcosta Blvd.

New board members are Capt. James Morton of the VCSD fire department; Ronald C. Rinard, manager of government affairs of Mead Johnson Laboratories; and Dr. Donald J. Williams, superintendent of the Murray School District.

Advisory board members meet once a month to provide the center's staff with reactions from the community to hours, services and other aspects of operation. Other advisory board members are Philip G. Flores, recently elected chairman; Mary Gehrke, R.N.; Dr. Floyd Naugle and Dr. Thomas R. White.

Operated by Valley Memorial Hospital, the Family Medical Center supplements the available health services in the valley by providing general medical care, including x-ray, laboratory, physical therapy, respiratory therapy and electrocardiograms. The modern facility is open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. every day of the week on a drop-in or appointment basis.

Murray vandalism tops agenda

DUBLIN— A report on vandalism at Murray district schools and the district's philosophy on discipline is on the agenda for the Murray parent-Administrative Council meeting of Thursday, Nov. 13 at Dublin School.

School representatives will convene at 8 p.m. at the school, located at 7997 Vomac Rd.

In addition to the vandalism report, first presented to Murray trustees Monday, Nov. 3, parents and administrators will also discuss discipline procedures at district schools and site and school plans for the new Dolan Intermediate School to be located adjacent to Silvergate. The model of the school will be at the meeting.

Want to join the majorettes?

PLEASANTON — Interested in trying out for the Amador High majorettes?

A clinic has started, and will be held every day at 2:15 p.m. in the quadrangle. Girls in eighth grade and above are welcome. Batons will be supplied.

Tryouts for majorettes will be held in January.

Further information is available from Kim Stowe, director of tryouts, at 846-6174.

Senior center a step closer

Dublin-San Ramon senior citizens are one step closer to having their own permanent senior center.

Valley Community Services District (VCSD) Board of Directnrs Tuesday night authorized the use of the drop-in room at Shannon Park Community Center as a senior center from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m weekdays.

Deck tables and chairs previously at Dublin Pool will be placed outside the senior center at Shannon.

Storage space for large and small items will be provided.

Director Ann Jolley noted these provisions are a good start, but they don't satisfy the whole need. "After all, a person can get lonely after 2 p.m."

The program will be reevaluated after 6 months.

Health center change planned

Reorganization plans are on the drawing board for the southern region of Alameda County Mental Health Services. The Valley Mental Health Center, Tri-City Center, and Eden Center will undergo administrative changes designed to "encourage varied program design, and increase efficiency of staff utilization."

The reorganization is proceeding under the direction of Dr. King G.Price, Acting Deputy Regional Director, South County Mental Health Dec. 1 is the target date for implementation of the new program.

Input and recommendations on the reorganization are being solicited currently from staff and interested citizens. Dr. Price will decide on the final organizational structure after it has been approved by local mental health directors, the Health Care Services Agency Director, and the County Administrator's office.

The plan calls for the appointment of a Valley Mental Health Cenetr Director. This is a new position. The director would be responsible for the Valley Crisis/Outpatient Clinic, Valley Mental Health Rehabilitation Service and Children's Service.

Citizen input to the director would come from the Valley Mental Health Center Advisory Board.

Kay McKeown, chief of Washington District Mental Health Rehabilitation Service. explained the reorganization at the Nov. 6 meeting of the Valley Council for Mental Health of the Mental Health Association of Alameda County.

McKeown said the plan is designed to allow increased "accountability, especially from the inside."

The Valley Mental Health Center Director would report directly to the regional Mental Health Director, currently Dr. Price. Under the reorganization, no new personnel would be hired. A person advancing from a lower position to sub-regional mental health director would not be replaced.

The action is necessitated by severe budget limitations. McKeown noted the money to pay personnel for increased responsibility must come from somewhere. New appointees will "bring their salaries with them" to the next position.

Price's plan calls for the creation of a regional planning and program evaluation officer. The officer's responsibilities would be to coordinate the writing of the Alameda County plan for submission to the State department of Mental Health. The officer also would evaluate programs within the region.

McKeown said the Valley Mental Health Center, and other sub-regional centers, would function under the guidelines set forth by the regional planning director, but would have latitude "to meet local needs within those guidelines."

Price noted centralizing the regional service might allow some reduction in administrative staff.

The new plan is expected to improve monitoring, record-keeping, and supervision of programs.

Try my do-it-yourself car check. 2 out of 3 drivers who did found dangerous or expensive problems in the making.

By Russ Russo, Shell Car Care Expert.

Tear this checklist out and keep it. Use it to go over your car. You might catch a serious problem before it catches you.

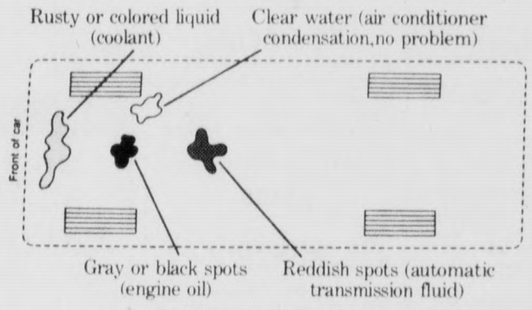
When we got 150 volunteers to check their own cars, two-thirds of them found something that could have led to a dangerous or expensive problem. And almost all of them found something that needed attention.

Of course your car might have problems that won't show up. But this inspection does cover some common and easy-to-find things that can cost you money if they're not taken care of.

How to decode driveway drips.

1. Leaks. A little puddle under the car might be innocent, or it might be the beginning of a big problem. Stay on the lookout with this little "drip map."

A piece of newspaper left under the car overnight will show which drips are new.



Rusty or colored liquid (coolant)
Clear water (air conditioner condensation,no problem)
Front of car
Gray or black spots (engine oil)
Reddish spots (automatic transmission fluid)

"That's so obvious! And I never saw it."

A lot of our volunteers had been overlooking problems that could be seen right from the driver's seat. Like these.

2. Instrument panel warning lights. These should light with the engine cranking, parking brake on. Common warning lights are for alternator, oil pressure, brakes, and temperature. Check your owner's manual if you're not sure which you should have.

3. Beep the horn. Don't laugh. Three of our people encountered silence.

4. Windshield washers and wipers. Do they spray right? Do they wipe clean?

5. Brakes. Push the pedal down. If it goes more than halfway to the floor, that's too far. And it should feel like it's hitting something hard. If it feels spongy, you might have air bubbles in the brake lines.

Now push the pedal down hard for the count of ten. If it continues to sink, you may have master cylinder troubles.

For power brakes, the engine must be running during this check.

Naturally, if you find anything suspicious about the brakes, have it taken care of pronto.

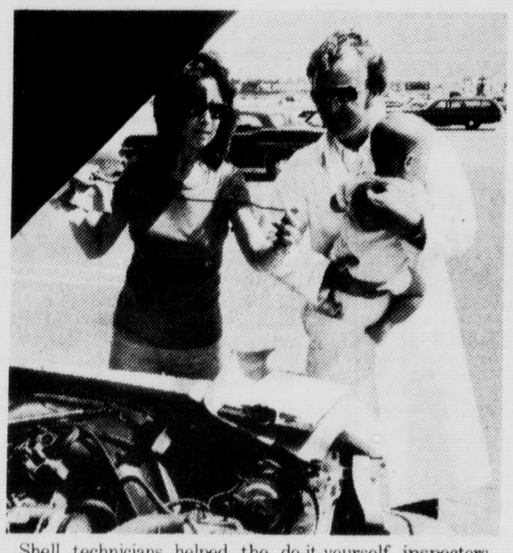
6. Parking brake. With the parking brake firmly set, put the car in "drive", or put it in first gear and let the clutch out a little. If the car moves easily, your parking brake flunks.

7. Lights. Get a helper to check as you turn them on. For headlights, check both high and low beams, and dashboard high-beam indicator. Then check emergency flashers, side markers, parking lights, license plate lights, tail lights, brake lights, backup lights and turn signals. (Key on for the last two.)

Self-serve gas buyers, be double careful here.

With no attendant to make these under-the-hood checks, they sometimes just aren't made.

Warning: Engine must be off for these under-the-hood checks.



Shell technicians helped the do-it-yourself inspectors locate certain parts. (And gave a hand now and then.) If you have trouble finding something while you're checking, see your owner's manual or ask your Shell dealer.

8. Motor oil. Pull the dipstick out, wipe it clean, put it all the way back in, then pull it out again and check the oil level. It should be above the "add" mark. Never overfill.

9. Windshield washer fluid. Check the level in the plastic tank.

10. Power steering fluid. If the people in our test group were typical, the location of the power steering pump is one of life's great mysteries. It's usually found on the driver's side, connected to the engine by a belt.

First, wipe off the pump's fluid reservoir cap and filler neck to keep dirt out of the fluid. Then take the cap off and check the fluid level with the built-in dipstick. It shows different levels for cold and hot.

Checking belt tension.

11. Belts. Check for proper tension by pressing down hard on the middle of each belt with your thumb. The belt shouldn't give more than about half an inch. Inspect the belts for fraying and cracks, too. Twist them around to inspect underneath.

12. Battery fluid. Warning: Don't smoke during this part. Batteries can give off explosive hydrogen.

Take the caps off and make sure that the acid solution inside the battery comes up to the bottom of the filler neck. If it's too low, add water.

13. Battery cables. Make sure they're tightly connected to the battery and aren't frayed. Light-colored powdery stuff on the terminals is corrosion and should be cleaned off.

"I once lost $300 by not checking that."

That's what one woman told me after she did these cooling system checks. Her car had overheated once and cracked the block.

14. Radiator coolant level. Warning: Never remove the radiator cap unless the engine is cold. Hot, pressurized coolant can scald.

With overflow tanks, coolant level can be checked without opening radiator.

You can check your coolant level just by looking at the coolant overflow tank if your car has one. Notice that there are different levels for hot and cold engines.

If your car has no overflow tank, remove the radiator cap to check. A level about an inch below the bottom of the filler neck is okay.

15. Radiator and heater hoses. Check the top and bottom radiator hose connections for leaks. Check the hoses for cracks and bulges.

Do the same for heater hoses since they carry your engine coolant, too.

One man was shocked when he found a bulge that looked like it might break any second. He said he had never noticed it, even though he checked his coolant regularly.

The most neglected item was one of the most important.

Our volunteers found more problems with tires than with anything else.

16. Tire pressure. A couple of bucks for a pressure gauge can help you save a lot of tire rubber. Fifty-seven people in our check found at least one low tire.

17. Tire wear. Check wear by looking for the tread wear indicators that show up when your tread gets down to the last 1/16th inch. If they show across two or more grooves, get a new tire. Also check for uneven tire wear.

Tread wear indicator shows all the way across this tire.

18. Shocks. Bounce the car up and down hard at each wheel. Once it's going good, let go and see how many times it bounces. Good healthy shocks will stop it after one bounce. Weak shocks that bounce twice or more cause unnecessary tire wear and maybe even handling problems.

If you make all these checks on your car, odds are you'll find something that needs attention. Do it every now and then — especially before a trip — and you'll cut down the risk of unpleasant surprises.

If you find a problem remember, your Shell dealer is in the problem-solving business.

He's got top-quality products to help you keep your car in peak condition. Like Shell Super X 10W-50 motor oil, with the widest multigrade range you can buy.

And Shell Super Regular Unleaded gasoline. In cars designed for unleaded, it fights knock and run-on with an octane rating higher than the average unleaded's.

This month at participating Shell Stations you can get a free Shell Auto Maintenance Record File. It's an envelope for keeping receipts and warranties, with a chart for recording services and a checklist to help you keep an eye on your car's health.
